

10

5

Method and compositions are described for treating an acute medical condition in a subject with a lipophilic agent, where the lipophilic agent is formulated in an oil, the formulation optionally including benzyl alcohol. The formulation is suited for administering the lipophilic agent subcutaneously to achieve rapid uptake by the blood and thereafter sustained delivery.